

A man in a grey shirt and dark pants stands on a winding gravel path that curves across a lush green hill. The sky is blue with scattered white clouds. In the background, a line of trees marks the crest of the hill.

WHILE OTHERS WAIT FOR THE FUTURE TO ARRIVE, WE WAIT FOR IT TO CATCH UP.

We don't want to dream about the future. We want to hold it in our hands. Right now. That may sound overly impatient, but it's an attitude that leads to great things. Like inventions. With patents. At North Carolina State University the projects we're working on right now will make an impact on the world. So we figure, why wait around for the future? Just focus your energy on the present, and the future gets here a whole lot faster.
